The Vault Luck Report

SaintZaps vs. godsend. — The Raccoon and The Machine

STAT	SAINTZAPS	GODSEND.
Packs Opened	256	1,153
Self-Pulled Cards	795	3,852
Cards From Others	35	50
Cards Dismantled	681	2,944
Legendaries (Pulled)	6	20
Mythics (Pulled)	0	5
Epics (Pulled)	35	179
Rares (Pulled)	65	407
Legendary Pull Rate	2.3%	1.7%
Legendary+ Pull Rate	2.3%	2.2%
Cores	230	374
Market Purchases	37	27
Market Listings	38	60
Trades Completed	41	332

All rarity counts reflect self-pulled cards only (original owner = current owner). Pull rates = legendaries per pack opened.

SaintZaps: The Raccoon (Revisited)

SaintZaps approaches The Vault the way a raccoon approaches a dumpster — with relentless, unhinged determination. This man has ripped open 256 packs, dismantled 681 cards into dust, completed 41 trades, bought 37 cards off the market, and listed 38 of his own. He is not a collector. He is a card economy. He IS the market.

Or so he thought. Because then godsend. showed up.

SaintZaps has 21 legendaries in his binder, which sounds impressive until you learn that 15 of those 21 were traded or bought from other players. The man actually pulled 6 legendaries from 256 packs. Six. That's a 2.3% legendary-per-pack rate. Not terrible, actually — marginally better than godsend's 1.7%. But "marginally better per pack" is cold comfort when the other guy has opened four and a half times as many packs.

> The SaintZaps Legendary Fraud Report: 15 of his 21 legendaries were acquired from other players — including Tsukuyomi, Hou Yi, Khepri, Hecate, Wilgy, Arondight, Bancroft's Talon, Ancile, Phantom Shell, Osiris (Full), Apollo, Elixir of Strength, Xayah, istealbuffs, and meatshoess. His "legendary collection" is a testament to hustle, not luck.

He also pulled an Epic Holo of himself (SaintZaps player card, March 12). Nothing quite says "I peaked" like pulling your own card and it being an epic, not a legendary. The universe said "you're good, but not THAT good."

He thought he was the hardest grinder in The Vault. He thought 41 trades was a lot. He thought 681 dismantles was commitment. Then godsend. walked in with 332 trades, 2,944 dismantles, and 5 mythics, and suddenly SaintZaps is the guy who ran a lemonade stand while godsend. was running Amazon.

Mythic count: 0. Two hundred and fifty-six packs. Zero mythics. Meanwhile godsend. has five. Five.

godsend.: The Machine That Doesn't Sleep

godsend. is not a person. godsend. is a phenomenon. This entity has opened 1,153 packs. One thousand, one hundred and fifty-three. SaintZaps' entire Vault career — all 256 packs, all the grinding, all the dismantling — is a rounding error in godsend.'s spreadsheet.

They have dismantled 2,944 cards. That is not a typo. Nearly three thousand cards fed into the wood chipper. They have completed 332 trades. SaintZaps thought he was a wheeler-dealer with 41. godsend. does 41 trades before breakfast on a slow Tuesday.

From those 1,153 packs, godsend. has self-pulled 20 legendaries and 5 mythics. That's 25 legendary+ cards from pure pack luck. No trading needed. No market manipulation. Just raw, industrial-scale pack ripping.

> The March 22nd Heater: godsend. went absolutely nuclear on March 22nd. In a single day, they pulled: Sol, Deathbringer, MYTHIC Bajan, MYTHIC Bellona, PR1MAL, Genji's Guard, Loki, Devourer's Gauntlet, Void Stone, darkiscorpion, Ganesha, and Apollo. That's 10 legendaries and 2 mythics in one day. SaintZaps has pulled 6 legendaries in his entire life. godsend. does that before lunch and still has room for seconds.

And then the very next day — March 23rd — they casually ripped a Legendary Full Art Spirit Robe followed four minutes later by a Mythic Reverse Apollo. Because of course they did. For godsend., pulling a mythic is like finding a quarter in the couch. Mildly pleasant, entirely routine.

But here's the thing that keeps this from being a 10/10 luck story: godsend.'s rate is actually mediocre. A 1.7% legendary-per-pack pull rate is lower than SaintZaps' 2.3%. Godsend. isn't lucky — godsend. is relentless. They simply opened so many packs that the law of large numbers kicked in and started handing them mythics out of obligation. Where SaintZaps tries to be lucky, godsend. made luck irrelevant through sheer volume.

They also have 26 legendary+ cards acquired from trades, including 3 traded mythics. Between self-pulled and acquired, godsend. is sitting on 51 legendary-or-above cards. SaintZaps has 21. Total. Combined. After all his hustling.

The Scale of the Mismatch

To understand the gap between these two, consider that godsend.'s dismantled cards (2,944) outnumber SaintZaps' total cards ever pulled from packs (~1,536 estimated from 256 packs). godsend. has destroyed more cards than SaintZaps has ever seen.

SaintZaps has completed 41 trades. godsend. has completed 332. That's not a comparison, that's a food chain. SaintZaps is the local card shop. godsend. is the distributor.

The one bright spot for SaintZaps? Per-pack legendary rate. At 2.3% vs 1.7%, Zaps technically gets more legendary cards per pack opened. In the same way that a go-kart technically has a better power-to-weight ratio than a freight train. The freight train doesn't care. It has five mythics.

SaintZaps — 6 Self-Pulled Legendaries

- ★ OnlyShelton (Player, Full)
- ★ Osiris (God, Holo)
- ★ Odin (God, Holo)
- ★ Shogun's Ofuda (Item, Holo)
- ★ GodShango (Player, Full)
- ★ RimCleaner (Player, Full)

+ 15 legendaries acquired via trades/market
0 mythics pulled. 0 mythics traded. 0 mythics.

godsend. — 20 Legendaries + 5 Mythics (All Pulled)

- ★ StepDentist (Player, Full)
- ★ Falues (Player, Full)
- ★ Aegis of Acceleration (Item, Reverse)
- ★ Arondight (Item, Reverse)
- ★ Akwuegbu (Player, Full)
- ★ Hades (God, Reverse)
- ★ Ganesha (God, Holo)
- ★ Nu Wa (God, Full)
- ★ Void Stone (Item, Reverse)
- ★ Sol (God, Reverse)
- ★ Deathbringer (Item, Full)
- ★ PR1MAL (Player, Holo)
- ★ Genji's Guard (Item, Reverse)
- ★ Loki (God, Full)
- ★ Devourer's Gauntlet (Item, Reverse)
- ★ Void Stone (Item, Holo)
- ★ darkiscorpion (Player, Reverse)
- ★ Ganesha (God, Full)
- ★ Apollo (God, Holo)
- ★ Spirit Robe (Item, Full)

- ✦ MYTHIC Void Shield (Item, Full)
- ✦ MYTHIC Baron Samedi (God, Reverse)
- ✦ MYTHIC Bajan (Player, Reverse)
- ✦ MYTHIC Bellona (God, Full)
- ✦ MYTHIC Apollo (God, Reverse)

+ 23 legendaries & 3 mythics acquired via trades (51 legendary+ total. That's not a collection, it's an armory.)

The Verdict

SaintZaps

4/10

LUCK RATING

Six self-pulled legendaries from 256 packs. Zero mythics. A 2.3% legendary pull rate that is technically better than godsend.'s — the one stat he can cling to, like a participation trophy in a room full of championship banners. He thought he was the hardest grinder in The Vault until godsend. showed up and made his entire career look like a tutorial level.

godsend.

7/10

LUCK RATING

Twenty self-pulled legendaries and five mythics from 1,153 packs. The rate is underwhelming (1.7%), but the volume is so incomprehensible that it doesn't matter. godsend. doesn't need luck. godsend. needs an intervention. 12 legendary+ cards in one day. 332 trades. 2,944 cards dismantled. This isn't collecting — it's a lifestyle.

SaintZaps brought a knife to a gunfight, and godsend. brought an aircraft carrier. Zaps' entire pack-opening history is a footnote in godsend.'s March 22nd. One man hustles for 21 legendaries. The other pulled 12 legendary+ cards before dinner and went back for more. The Vault doesn't reward the passionate — it rewards the relentless.